

Deborah Hayner

Deborah Hayner was born in San Francisco in 1952. She attended the Academy of Art University with special interest in design, and mixed media. Her studio is currently located at Hunters Point Shipyard where she works in an assortment of mediums that include but are not limited to - found object assemblage, collage, installations, water based painting, photo manipulations, and art to wear. She exhibits her work regularly and often participates in open studio where she looks forward to composing installations ranging from cat fur mobiles to assemblage created from things she finds along the way.

Her art work in the Elements exhibition "Cyclone Wildebeest" is the first piece to emerge from a series she is developing that pays specific attention to the catastrophic events that are occurring world wide and have been mysteriously predicted from various sources over a large period of time.
